Comments: My husband and I live across W. Sequim Bay Road and our lot extends into the tidelands. We were not able to attend the meeting in Sequim, but have reviewed information about concerns related to the master plan. In particular, we feel that the plan is extremely open-ended in describing restrictions for aquaculture. All of the hard work and money spent to restore salmon and clean up our waterways are threatened by the pollution from commercial aquaculture.

As I write this, robo calls are going out to local residents describing the dangers of the collapse of RR Bridge. The Dungeness River is in flood stage due to the series of mid winter pineapple express storms. Not to firmly address the threats of climate change in our sensitive environment is a serious oversight.
