- No, but I'm interested in these shoreline areas:

Comments:

Geoduck farms are far more harmful than beneficial.
You threaten a delicate and intricate ecosystem when ideas such as these are proposed.

See the case of Capitol Lake in Olney, WA for a perfect example. At one point, the public was allowed to fish in the lake's waters. That stopped when the infestation of New Zealand mud snails came. Though this wasn't a planned occurrence, the effect remains the same everyone (including us!) is affected by those sorts of environmental changes
