Re: October monitoring

Hello and Happy Autumn! We had a great turnout for our recent stream team training; 18 new team members are now fully trained. Many thanks go to Bob Hays for being assistant trainer, and to the Peabody Creek team of Liz and Jake Jay and Ed Chadd for teaching macroinvertebrate sampling on Thursday night. And of course to all the new volunteers for their participation, and to the existing volunteers for sticking around!

Here is the hot-off-the-presses team roster, so all stream team members can communicate with each other. It is time for fall monitoring, so you should be using this phone list soon! Please note, Bob Hays has a new phone number and I added the new volunteers to the list. New volunteers have their stream name in italics.

I have called all of the team captains to remind you to schedule your fall sampling date - if you haven't called yet, please do. If you haven't established cross-sections yet, please try to do it this session. If you want assistance with the cross-section or the macroinvertebrate sampling, let us know. We do have some good videos in the office if you want to review macroinvertebrate sampling, the Streamkeeper concept, or why freshwater monitoring is significant.

Hope you are all well. Thanks for your work. Our next get-together will be a macroinvertebrate ID party in November.
